Summer, 1901      2000      Bournebrook (          ), England

Type B

Mr. W., now 85, describes an encounter as a boy in West Midlands in the garden of his home. He saw a peculiar structure 5x4x3.5 feet, like a box with a turret, blue-green in color, on the ground. From an open door came two small humanoid figures wearing tight grey uniforms and helmets with two wire-like antennas. One stayed by the door and the second approached the boy with arms outstretched, as if to warn him away. The figures re-entered the object which then took off with a flash and loud noise, trailing behind it a red flame. W. believes the object was seen by several other children.

05-02 April, 1905* Afternoon Perm', Russia

Type E

In a dark corridor of the Orthodox Cathedral of Perm', the 10-year-old Anatol J. Shneiderov saw about 10 paces away, emitting no heat, a red aureole within which was "jumping" a black humanoid 3-4 ft tall. It had two very large owl-like eyes reflecting red light, a short beak-like nose, and a large mouth running from ear to pointed ear, out of which its doglike tongue protruded. "It looked at me; it jumped and teased me." Thinking it was a "trick" of some kind by another boy, the witness rushed at it, but the aureole and being floated away from him, disappearing when it reached the head of the stairs. Only then did the boy feel fear.

07-01

Summer, 1907 Vilppula, Finland

Type B

Some boys playing on the lake shore saw a bright light approach from the lake and land on the beach near them. A door appeared in the object, and some humanoids emerged. The boys panicked and ran to the rectory; only after some hours could they give a coherent story. Adults who visited the site found both landing traces and footprints on the sand.

October 24, 1908 2330 Ware (Hampshire), Mass.

Type F

W. E. Foster, engineer at the power house of the local street railway, heard a voice calling from the air above his head, asking "What place is this?" He called back, "Ware," and saw about 150 or 200 feet overhead a light, "like a flashlight," traveling from NE to SW. So far as was known, there was no balloon in that area at that time.

09-03 May 18, 1909 2300 Caerphilly Mountain, Wales

Type B

Reaching the mountain crest on foot about 11 o'clock, C. Lethbridge was surprised to see "a long tube-shaped affair lying in the grass, with 2 men busily engaged with something nearby...They appeared to have big, heavy fur coats, and fur caps fitted tightly over their heads." When he was within 20 yards, "they jumped up & jabbered furiously in a strange lingo." Then "the long thing rose up slowly, and when it was a few feet off the ground the men jumped into a kind of little carriage suspended from it, & gradually the whole affair rose into the air in a zig-zag fashion." When they had cleared the telegraph wires, 2 lights shone out, and the thing sailed away toward Cardiff, making "an awful noise." At the bottom of the carriage were a couple of wheels, & at the tail a whirling fan. At the site next day were found footprints, torn newspapers, & "a quantity of pulpy paper like papier mâché." There was also a red label in French, attached to a chain & a small pin, "described by a Cardiff resident engaged on airship construction as...used to regulate the valve of the pump which injected air into an airship." A cigar-shaped airship bearing 2 lights was widely reported at the time.

December 23, 1909 +1900 Natick (Middlesex), Mass.

Type A

During the wave of mystery "airship" sightings in the Boston area, reports from Natick described the vehicle as approaching to within 150 feet of the earth. Passengers of a streetcar said the object had the shape of a monoplane; in the long body of the machine, some said they could see two men on board, one forward near the bright headlight, and a second man aft, near a more dimly glowing tail light. At times the ship seemed to stop and hover briefly and then move on with a burst of speed and ascend to a very high altitude. Scores in Natick saw the airship.
